Input data for determining the volume of strategic reserves for the winter 2018-2019

In the framework of the volume determination for the strategic reserves, Elia organized a public consultation in May 2017 on the methodology, the different assumptions and data sources that will be used to determine the volume of strategic reserves for the winter 2018-2019.

As indicated at that time, an additional consultation on the raw input data used for the calculation of the volume of strategic reserves would be organized end of August.

The consultation aims to receive any comments of market participants on these raw data. The consultation period is set from Monday 21 August until Monday 18 September 2017, 6:00pm. The consulted document is an excel file with all input data. An explanation of the assumptions on which the next volume evaluation for the strategic reserves will be based for winter 2018-2019, is given in a separate document (presentation). All documents are available on Elia's website.

The reactions can be communicated to Elia until Monday 18 September 2017, 18:00, at the following email address: usersgroup@elia.be. It is important to know that all remarks will be published at the end of the consultation unless the respondent requests confidentiality in its response.

Elia will publish a summary of the received reactions in a consultation report in order to inform market parties on all received reactions and to give its replies to these reactions. This will also be presented in the Task Force "Implementation Strategic Reserves".

Kind Regards,
